

I would hope that the Privacy Law stays in place. It borders on the lines of harrassment getting unwanted phone calls in the evenings. The banks really have nerve wanting to do that, especially since for the most part they are useless and not helpful to the public. If the Privacy Law does not stay in place, should we press charges for harrassment? I don't think they have the right to do that.